1. Shelby the Eagle (My first mini-novelette)

While sitting in my recliner, looking out at my patio, a giant bird landed on my patio roof. I was drinking my glass of wine. The wheels of creation started to turn. This story is about an eagle that made a nest on my patio roof. Then spawned eaglets. I produced a video and posted it on YouTube. The events got out of hand and disaster followed. I had to leave and became a fugitive living high up in the nearby mountains.

A wannabee boxer who releases his anger toward the world in the ring and is aided by an awesome left hook that comes out of nowhere when he is down and out. This is a typical CIA spy/assassin story. I have visited the CIA building in Langley Virginia several times while working. I also was a partner in my own company. In fact, I helped design a time distribution system that was installed at the CIA headquarters in all their corridors. It looked like a three cornered hat. Does the CIA have real assassins working for them? You bet they do.
